Zeustian Logic

By Sabrina Malcolm

A big-hearted novel about the aftermath of tragedy, with a fresh and funny take on boyhood obsessions of Greek myth, astronomy and computer gaming.

GECKO PRESS

Family, friendship, mountain heroics and small daily acts of courage: a funny, tender, beautifully observed debut.

Interview with Sabrina Malcolm about Zeustian Logic

When Sabrina began this book in a writing workshop with Mal Peet, Mal told me she was one to watch. He was right, of course—this is a warm and wonderful novel from a very strong writer.

When Zeus, king of the gods, made enemies, he just hurled a thunderbolt at them. That's one way to deal with your problems. Tuttle, a.k.a. Zeustian Logic, has problems of his own. His father was a famous mountain guide who didn't come back. At least Tuttle has the stars. Everything's out there, indifferent and immense.

Zeustian Logic will be launched at Space Place, with a lights show of the constellations featured in the book, an educational tour, and miscellaneous spacey activities...
